

User Training G-Core/G-SIM

What does the training involve?

You will get to know the user interfaces of your GEUTEBRÜCK system in detail. Learn how to operate the G-View (G-Core) and OpCon (G-SIM) software so that you can get the maximum benefit from it. You will switch on cameras, work with alarms, export image data or compile all relevant images for a search.

In the online phase, we introduce you to the company and basic knowledge about video technology. You will also learn the basics of the software. You will need this knowledge in the presence phase. In the classroom phase, you will then learn the individual steps in the user interface. You will work with the system in the same way as you use it in your everyday work.

Who is the training aimed at?

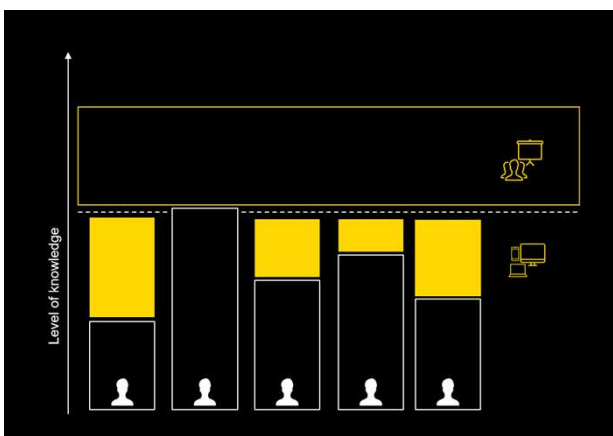

Users of GEUTEBRÜCK systems who have to deal with the operation of the systems (G-Core & G-SIM) on a daily basis. Both user interfaces will be trained on one day. If you only use G-Core, please let us know in advance.

This training does not require any prior knowledge of video technology.

When does the online period take place?

After you have registered for a training course, you will receive timely access to the Geutebrück Online Academy LearninG and will find your preparatory training modules there. You will work on these until the start of the classroom event. When and how you work on the modules is up to you. In this way, you can acquire the necessary basic knowledge without being tied to a specific location or time and integrate the training into your daily work routine in the best possible way.

Why do the online courses have to be completed in the preliminary stages?

Anyone who has ever participated in a training or a course knows the following situation. The group has different levels of prior knowledge and in the process of the training the gap between the participants tends to widen rather than narrow.

Through web-based training, which is provided in pleasant small modules in advance, we can ensure that the individual knowledge levels of our training participants are aligned to a certain degree when the classroom training begins.

This way you will benefit optimally from your training.
